Congress and Kansas.

Considering the diversity of opinion held in relation to the future of Kansas, and the seeming doubtful complexion of the national Congress, we did not trust our prescient capacity sufficiently, heretofore, to hazard a prediction; but present legislatve tendency, in the great Colliseum of our cis-atlantic Rome, fixes, beyond a doubt, the purpose tion to admit Kansas under the Lecomped through the force of circumstances.

hands of the Senate Committee, a bill partly frustrated, as he succeeded in reproviding for the admission of Kansas leasing himself from their grasp and by will, without, doubt be omnibused thro' each house, possibly with a proviso, giving power (which all know to be only inherent with the people) to the citizens

a Special Committee, in opposition to immediately leave the county. the wishes of the administration, was hailed by some, as a sure prestige of the success which they so much covered for the Free State cause, but every hope is banished, for the future, other than the people of Kansas themselves, and to their determinate counsels we must not believed to the permanence of the submit o now look, for whatever of dignity remains to the exercise of the Heavenmains to the exercise of the Heavenguarantied privilege of freemen, to defend and uphold the sacred investiture
